

OCETA

OCETA is a private, not-for-profit Corporation based in Mississauga, Ontario, and one of three Canadian Environmental Technology Advancement Centres. The core mandate of OCETA is to provide technical and business services to support the commercialization and market adoption of clean technologies and environmentally sustainable solutions. Since its formation in 1993, OCETA has successfully delivered on specific mandates for municipal, provincial and federal governments that have achieved multiple benefits around innovation, job creation, economic development and environmental protection.

OCETA delivers specialized technical review and due diligence services to both public and private sector buyers of clean technology products and services. OCETA also has the sole license to manage the Canadian Environmental Technology Verification Program. In executing this role, OCETA has developed a practical management framework to baseline, measure and verify the environmental performance of technologies, products and projects. To accelerate the widespread adoption of clean technology solutions, OCETA is carrying out demonstration opportunities in partnership with industry leaders, where both “near-market” and recent “in-market” products can be tested and their performance independently validated under real-world commercial conditions. These strategic demonstration projects generate outcomes that can drive market transformation.
